A modern Petropavlovsk-Kamchatsky – is the city of fishermen and sailors, teachers and doctors, scientists and servicemen; it's the city of students; it has a leading position in business and cultural life of Kamchatka.

You will learn the history of Petropavlovsk-Kamchatsky, the oldest town in the Far East. From the observation deck located on the hill Petrovskaya there is a wonderful view of the Avacha bay – the best harbor in the world – surrounded by active and extinct volcanoes. In the historical part of the town you will see the monuments to great seafarers: V. Bering, Jean François de Galaup, comte de Lapérouse, Ch. Clark. On the hill of Love you will get acquainted with memorial complex dedicated to heroic defense of the town in 1854 from Anglo-French squadrons.

This excursion sheds light on fishery and food industry, science and health care, construction of new districts, and prospects for the nearest future of Kamchatka.

When you see the Pacific Ocean at the first time ever – you understand that it is much greater than you have imagined. You will get acquainted with unusual world of natural phenomena of the Kamchatka eastern coast, you will hear oceanic surf and will fall in love with this sound; you will see a popular highest wave, and collect little souvenirs thrown out by a tidal wave.

The route ends on the Halaktyrsky beach. The sand of the beach is rich in magnetite, in titanomagnetite and in dark-colored minerals: that is why the sand is black. There are some minerals from the Avachinsky group of volcanoes in its structure. Black sands are typical for many beaches in volcanic areas in the Pacific Ocean. Famous black sands of Waikiki beach in Hawaii are of the same type as Kamchatka sands. The layer of sand deposits on the Halaktyrsky beach is 20-30 meters, the width of tidal area and longshore bar is up to 100 meters.
