Rafting on the river Bystraya Malkinskaya, 3 days

The river Bystraya (fast) – is the second longest river of Kamchatka situated in the central part of the peninsula. It starts at the foot of the volcano Bakening and flows to the west to the sea of Okhotsk. Its length is 275 km and the catchment area is 10 800 square km. In its middle stream there are a series of easy but impressive rapids. The maximum water level is reached in June and in July due to intense melting of the mountain snow. During this period the river is changing: its rapids transform, new canals arise in the downward area of the rafting, tree blockage on the river way. There are amazing views along the rafting: it is the very place where the Sredinny ridge begins. Tourists have a wonderful opportunity to admire Kamchatka's tall grasses, unusual rocky shores, small fields of iris and thin birches. It is possible to collect mushrooms and berries along the route, to watch sea gulls, wild ducks, and, possibly, a Kamchatka brown bear.

Almost every tourist, rafting on the river Bystraya, has seen a brown bear. Fishing lovers will be pleasantly amazed.

The third day of the rafting is the most adventurous and extreme one: the tourists will pass all the boisterous rapids and this will leave an unforgettable mark in their memories.
